

Food Allergy Training & Preparedness Program for Schools & Daycares

Belay and the Elijah-Alavi Foundation have partnered to bring the gold standard of food allergy training to schools and daycares. This is the first and only accredited food allergy training program in North America. It is in accordance with recently passed Elijah's Law, which now requires daycares and childcare providers to follow guidelines for the prevention of, and proper response to, food allergy anaphylaxis.

Belay is a healthtech company focused on bringing cutting edge solutions to the management of food allergies. In addition to their training program, Belay has created a free app for parents helping them to share and communicate their children's food allergies with other caregivers.
